TRANSFER COURSES: FREQUENTLY ASK QUESTIONS

• How many courses can I transfer?

As many as 4 courses may be transferred from another institution toward the B.A. in Psychology. A course will only be considered for transfer if Emory College has previously approved it as counting toward general graduation requirements. If a student has taken additional courses at another institution that cannot be transferred toward the Psychology degree (e.g., because the student has already had 4 transfer courses approved), these courses can be counted toward the general College graduation requirements as long as the course(s) have been approved for transfer credit by Emory College.

• Should I bring back a syllabus from the course I took?

Yes, you will need to have a course syllabus to get final approval for your course.

• What kind(s) of course(s) will be approved for transfer credit

Courses that have a clear counterpart in our curriculum usually stand a good chance of being approved for transfer. However, we will also consider petitions for courses that do not have an Emory counterpart. We do not award transfer credit for directed research and reading.

• Who makes the decisions?

The Undergraduate Curriculum Committee will review your transfer paperwork and make a decision on the transfer credit to be awarded.

• Can I take classes at Emory that are similar to the one I took at another University

No. Once a course has been accepted for transfer, the parallel psychology course at Emory may not be taken for credit toward the degree. There will be a notation at the bottom of your approval letter showing any courses that you may NOT take at Emory once your transfer courses have been approved.

• How long does it take for the Committee to make decisions? When do they meet?

Student petitions will be considered during the fourth full week of the semester. Petitions not received by this time will not be acted on until the following semester. Students will be informed of the committee's decision within two weeks of the deadline.
